Questions regarding division of land by testamentary provisions: (1) how does the county determine if a quit claim deed recorded by the executor of an estate is in conformance with RCW 58.17.040(3); and (2) does the executor have the right to subdivide property has he or she sees fit, or is it more complicated than that?

There's a good discussion of the testamentary exception to the subdivision statutes in In re Estate of Telfer [http://r20.uw.edu/telisp/?=O30thRx-hyalOq4Z3-0dKG4zQ6a8R7u0K_V_1?en0mgq_5whYQ5UYuP6MA6wb7PXi6Ndh7x29gDbN-htPbGzCpm9wY7y9dyRAHnv917wQ38um7zF_fDAtakGpBpmpwvYQwniu8ItA92m8ku4SEEsBemLrylDPPSSfplrtR2JfKrTAn-0QQsivMQzqRA==&c=3yY72Fz7K4eOQ008LTMKmLMqMqMcXgX1HfF-MurkTev3io3HfGw==&ch=cnMmRvijAooRgB-4fG3KFTqSDb5UXAd33GQ18i5YfR66hX-YeSg==] 71 Wn. App. 833, 836-37 (1993).
Laws of descent are those governing transmission of an intestate's real property. Heirs take property by laws of descent as tenants in common. Creating a tenancy in common does not constitute a property division because it does not create new parcels. Statutes should not be interpreted in such a manner as to render any portion meaningless, superfluous or questionable. To give substantive meaning to the phrase "[t]he laws of descent" the property held in tenancy in common resulting from intestacy must be divisible into separate parcels without complying with the platting requirements. Under this reading, "divisions" does not mean that the property is legally divided ipso facto by the laws of descent, but that the division, by agreement or partition action, which ensues following the operation of the laws of descent is exempt from platting requirements.

Given the meaning of "division" with regard to the laws of descent, established principles of statutory construction and normal rules of grammar require that "division" have the same meaning as applied to "testamentary provisions". That is, a will need not divide the property into separate parcels, but a division of the property by those taking under the residuary clause may be made without complying with short plat requirements.

(Our emphasis; footnotes omitted.) So, either the will would divide the property or that would be done by the executor. or, we suppose, by agreement of the heirs. We think it's not more complicated than that.

But a division made by testamentary provisions does not mean that the lots created thereby can be developed. The court in Telford also stated: [W]e emphasize that our holding is not to be understood as intimating that the parcels resulting from the division are exempt from any other land use regulations." Id. at 837. See also, Dykstra v.
