Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

ELECTION

2015

It will be of particular importance to District 2 as area grows

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.

Candidates sound off on county's growth management plan

By KATY LILLY
Columbia staff writer

Candidates from Clark County council districts 2 and 4 say the region, which stretches from the Haeundae Mountains to the Columbia River, is a unique place where a variety of uses can co-exist.

The district is home to farms, suburbs and Ridgefield, Washington's fastest-growing city.