Comments My concern is to hold the reins on accelerated growth a bit, preserve what open space we have left, and our forested areas in the city boundary. What I fear is that the rush to get 'big', is moving at a faster pace than many of us want, or that we can afford. We have been discovered. True, I realize that means more tax money for our gov to spend, which sometimes feels like a salivating insatiable monster. Protect what we have while we still have it, and control the housing sprawl. A little consideration for those of us that can't keep up with the continuous property tax increases. Cool it a little, We'd like to stay here.
Regards, Rj
